

Of the several Proceedings before the FCC (RM-10867 - RM-10870), I believe that RM-10869 is in the best interest of the public, preserves a logical technical progression and incentive for improvement in the amateur radio service, and maintains a modest incentive for improvement in morse code skills. These skills allow one to reasonably make one's own equipment and experiment with it, as well as be prepared for emergency operations in extreme conditions.

Each of the other referenced filings, fall short in at least one of these areas of importance to me and the public, so I support RM-10869.
